LIQUOR FIGHT IN LEGISLATURE

Anti-Saloon League Presents Bills in the Senate.

TO SAVE WATER POWER RIGHTS

Measure Would Repeal Eminent Domain Rights of Companies to Secure Water Courses—Other Newsy Items From Harrisburg.

By ROBERT HAIGHT.

Harrisburg, March 18

Just as the house was congratulating itself that it had settled the liquor legislation for the session by the defeat of the amendment to the constitution providing for state-wide prohibition it develops that the anti liquor cause has decided that it would be well to continue the fight by originating legislation through the medium of the senate

The latest move of the Anti Saloon League to antagonize the liquor interests is the presentation of the bill by Senator Sensenich, of Westmoreland county which provides that whenever a number of electors of any township borough, city or county, equaling not less than 51 per cent of the number of the votes cast at the last preceding election shall petition the court of quarter sessions of the proper county that it refuse to grant licenses for the sale of liquors, the court shall refuse all applications for licenses in said township borough, city or county

It is further provided that the petitions are to be filed in accordance with the rules governing petitions for and against granting of license The bill was referred to the law and order committee of the senate, and an effort is to be made by the anti saloon forces to have it acted upon by that body at an early date

The senate also had presented to it by Senator Gerberich which is known as the pure whisky bill This measure defines what ingredients are to be used in the manufacture of whisky and provides that each container shall bear a statement showing the liquor's age, strength, amount, name and address of the manufacturer The penalty for violation of the act is a fine of not less than $250 nor more than $1000 or imprisonment of no less than six months or more than one year for each offense

In the house a bill has been presented by Representative Dunn of Huntingdon county, providing for the sterilization of drinking glasses in saloons Each glass must be thoroughly sterilized or cleansed with boiling water each time it is used and failure to do so is punishable by a fine of not less than $100

Another measure touching on this subject has been offered by Representative Gray, of Cambria in which it is made compulsory that all wholesale and retail liquor houses shall remain closed on Good Friday and Christmas day, under penalty of a fine of not more than $500

The house committee on law and order has taken favorable action on the club license bill, which is said to have the backing of Governor Tener This bill has been amended from its original form, so that it now reads that the license fee shall be $50 for every hundred members, to be paid annually If this was all that the bill contained it is doubtful if it would meet with more than slight opposition But it still contains the clause which provides that the clubs shall be subject to the same restrictions which govern regularly licensed hotels and saloons, which means that no liquors can be dispensed even to members on Sundays or legal holidays when the other saloons are compelled by law to remain closed It is therefore more than likely that when the measure is brought up for consideration it will lead to a fight even more bitter than that waged by the Anti Saloon League or the Prohibitionists

The house has refused to place upon calendar the Keyport bill which provides that all liquor dealers who are established in business and who are refused a renewal of their licenses for any cause shall be reimbursed by the state for their financial loss and the law and order committee has negatived the bill penalizing any saloon keeper who allows one person to treat another by forfeiting his license

Seeking Water Power Rights

Another effort to secure water power rights is the intent of the bill just presented to the senate by Senator Crow of Fayette county This is the second measure of this character to appear in the senate this session and it differs somewhat from the previous one in that the water companies are given the right of eminent domain to obtain only land and not streams The present fight is the same as has been going on since 1905, when the legislature repealed the law giving eminent domain rights to water companies Since that time each legislature has been importuned to restore the rights which were conferred in Pennsylvania for a quarter of a century by which these companies virtually controlled all the available water supply

Senator Crow's bill seeks to repeal the act taking away the eminent domain rights by providing That no water company hereafter incorporated shall have powers or exercise the right of eminent domain as respects the appropriation of the streams, rivers or waters of this commonwealth, nor the land covered thereby, provided that any water company by and with the consent of the water supply commission or any other body which may be hereafter created or appointed may exercise the right of eminent domain with respect to any such land for the purpose of impounding and conserving the waters of any such stream or rivers and equalizing the flow

It will be observed that by the terms of this bill water companies are merely given the right of eminent domain for the purpose of obtaining land and not water courses, whereas a similar bill touching on this subject and presented earlier in the session by Senator McNichol, of Philadelphia, gives eminent domain rights to all water companies chartered since 1905 thus breaking down everything that was brought about by the repeal passed during the Pennypacker administration It is said that a big corporation with unlimited funds, is ready to be formed so as to obtain these rights in Clarion county.

Favorable Report on Oleo Bill

After a series of hearings, in which the various subjects were considered at length in all their phases, the house committee on health and sanitation has taken final action on a number of bills which have been in its possession for some time past. Prominent among those to receive favorable consideration is the Richards oleomargarine bill, which permits oleo to be colored by the same substances used by manufacturers of creamery butter and by farmers Shipments, however, must be placed in a carton, sealed and labeled with letters not less than three-eighths of an inch high The argument is used in behalf of this bill that oleo manufacturers should be allowed to have the same right to color their product as the manufacturers of butter, and it is claimed that the passage of the act would greatly reduce the price of butter Some equally strong arguments are made against the passage of the bill and when it comes up for consideration it will no doubt meet with strenuous opposition

This same committee has reported favorably on the bill providing that permission must be obtained from the state health commissioner and the local board of health to drain any sewage or other refuse into any streams of the state, also on the bill providing for a bureau of sanitary inspection in the health department for control of tenement boarding and lodging houses and on the bills providing that physicians and midwives must report all cases of infantile blindness and for a state board of barber examiners

Negative reports are made on the bills providing for a state board of neuropathic examiners and the Richards bill establishing a state board of naturopathic (or drugless) examiners The former bill passed the house last session and was held up in the senate but this year could not even run the gauntlet of the house committee

A determined effort to pass an amendment to the primary election bill whereby the primary elections would be held on Tuesday instead of Saturday met with overwhelming defeat in the house The amendment seemed to be in great favor with the Allegheny county delegation, Representative Allen advocating the change for the reason that the election officers are now compelled to work on Sunday in counting the votes Charges were made by other members that the returns were often 'doctored by reason of the delay in making up the result over Sunday, but on behalf of the farmers it was contended that they usually take a half holiday on Saturday and are thus more apt to find time to vote and that traveling men are usually at home on Saturdays while they could not be home to vote on Tuesday The proposed change was defeated by a vote of 108 to 43

Prevents Enameled Ware Utensils

A bill preventing the sale of agate or enamel cooking utensils has been presented by Representative O Neill of Philadelphia It is claimed by some of the medical fraternity that antimony and other dangerous substances which melt at low temperatures are used in the manufacture of these vessels and that when these reach the human stomach are frequently the cause of appendicitis or other stomach complaints Should the bill become a law it would mean a great boost for the use of aluminum ware cooking utensils and work a great hardship on the many cheap imitations of enameled ware

Senator McNichol has presented six important bills in the senate which if adopted, will have a great tendency to raise the revenues of the state One bill taxes the bonds of corporations four mills and it is estimated that this would produce a revenue to the state of about $10,000 000 annually Under the present law the corporations are required to pay such a tax only upon bonds held by persons residing in the state and there is no definite means to ascertain who holds the bonds therefore the state loses millions of dollars annually The new law would tax all bonds, whether held by domestic or foreign holders

Another bill provides that the savings institutions shall be compelled to pay a four mills tax on their investments, while at present they are exempted from taxation An eight mills tax on the stock of baggage and transfer companies is also proposed and another measure provide that securities held by stockholders of a trust company are also subject to taxation and a further bill provides that the state shall return to the counties all of the personal property tax Under the present law the counties only receive three-fourths of this tax, one fourth going to the state

A Winter on a Mountain Top

As one climbs up to the mountain top the danger from lightning increases rapidly, and, as a rule, the observatories located on the mountain tops are rather uncomfortable places of residence, as discovered by the scientific gentlemen who have had the experience of a winter on a mountain top It is evident that ordinary lightning rods are entirely inadequate to carry off the enormous discharges of the mountain thunderstorms There are several observatories on Mont Blanc, and at one of them, that of Janssen there have been a number of bombardments, during which the interior of the place was filled with ribbonlike sheets of electricity and balls of fire which moved silently from point to point.—Exchange

Breakfast in Norway

Home brewed beer has of late years says Harold Simpson in his "Rambles in Norway" largely displaced spirits as the national drink of the Norwegians It is so popular that it is used even at breakfast to wash down the stock dish—fried pork smothered in onions The first sight of a Norwegian breakfast table, adds the author is apt to astound one It is covered with small dishes, principally fish—fresh fish smoked fish fish in tins fish in miniature barrels There are also cold meats and an endless variety of cheeses, of which the Norwegians are very fond

Queer Railroad Customs.

They have a curious way of managing some railways in Syria Weary of much riding a party of travelers on their way to Beirut resolved one day to go by train They arrived at a primitive station, but could find no station master Presently however, one of the camp followers arrived, looked about and, spying a small red flag lying on the platform, made off with it along the line When a train came in the man waved his flag, the engine driver pulled up and the travelers got in Later, while the train was puffing on its way, the guard came along the footboard and issued the tickets carefully noting down the names, nationality and occupations of the passengers Two stations farther on they got out, and here there was not only a station master, but a porter, and the latter stayed with them all day in an orchard till the camp arrived, meanwhile feeding them with honey from the comb Where else, one wonders, could such a charming railway system be found? — Wide World Magazine.

The Only Way

The old lady was very fond of preaching the efficacy of perseverance. In fact, she rode her hobbyhorse so much to death that her servant at last got quite tired of her everlasting "Persevere—perseverel It is only through perserevance one can accomplish anything in this world."

One day the old lady had visitors, and a large number of delicious apple dumplings were served up These, however, were not all partaken of, eight or nine being sent downstairs again

On the following day the old lady invaded the lower regions and ordered the leftover dumplings to be warmed up for dinner But, greatly to her consternation, she found they had all gone

"Sally," she cried, "where are the dumplings left from yesterday?"

"Eaten 'em, mum," was the laconic lady's reply

"Eaten them! Good heavens! How did you manage it?"

"Perseverance, mum," came the tart reply.—London Answers.

Jarred the New Yorker.

A traveling salesman blew into Little Rock, Ark , and, going to the leading merchant, said pompously "I'm from New York I want to show you the newest line of"—

"Where did you say you were from?" asked the merchant, getting ready to do some "kidding" The swell headed manner of the New Yorker had ruffled him The salesman seemed to think the fact that he was from New York was something to make rural merchants' jaws drop open He was what we western people call a "New York fool"—the one kind that's hopeless

"Why, I'm from New York " repeated the gingery, swell up geek

"Who runs the hotel in that town?" asked the merchant in a friendly manner.—Philadelphia Telegraph

Mother's Inadequate Replies.

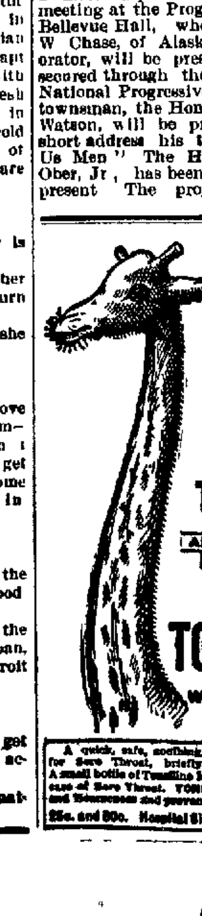

It is said that the average child's favorite word is still "why," which indicates that, in spite of all gloomy views the infantile craving for knowledge has not degenerated And the mother still makes the answer which calls for the least reflection, but this, of course, is where the need of a wider spread of maternal information is called for The modern child looks round and sees things which it has always remembered, but which have come to the mother among the unexpected "marvels of the age" And even the most anxious and willing parent may have to think twice when the child, who wants to know, asks "why" the telephone talks, the aeroplane flies the submarine dives the gramophone sings, the typewriter prints and the electric kettle boils itself?—New York Tribune

The Grand Canyon.

In the Grand canyon the highest sides are 6,233 feet above the stream, but they are perpendicular for only some 3,000 feet, when the gloomy chasm is often but a few hundreds of feet wide. Above that the sides slope off in a series of cliffs to the level of the surrounding country, and if the world lasts long enough and a greater rainfall should come a deep and wide valley will exist there some day It would be folly to attempt to say when the erosion that has made the canyon first set in. It may have been as long ago as a million years The exact time is pure guesswork.—Exchange.

Proof Positive—Perhaps!

Two young women were exchanging confidences one afternoon as they sipped their tea. "Well," replied the other, "he must love you if he kissed you!"—London Mail.

REVIEW OF EVENTS AT COUNTY SEAT

Interesting Correspondence from Our Doylestown Representative.

Doylestown March 19

Much interest was taken in the county seat over the trial of the Smith brothers, charged with murder, and after the case had gone to the jury but few of the spectators who had watched the case closely, looked for anything but a verdict of murder in the first degree against James Smith although there was a small opening for the reasonable doubt so often invoked by jurymen as a salve to their conscience

We have had many murder trials in Bucks county in recent years but since the late sixties no man has been convicted of murder, the last one was Teufel It is a condition much to be deplored as it may lead as in the Coatesville case to the people taking the law in their own hands and resort to lynching The case was well and fairly tried in every way but the Smiths failed to explain to anyone's satisfaction just why they sat up that night from eleven until two waiting for Doyle to return home and why the revolver and razors were all ready laid out on the table where they could be quickly used

The trolley men accused of knocking down fares came near getting away entirely In the first case tried that of John Buck, the Commonwealth proved the failure of the conductor to register a large number of fares but the defense claimed that as the conductor made his settlement in Trenton the embezzlement if there was any, took place in another state and therefore was not triable here Buck was acquitted on all of the bills against him, eleven in number and each bill with three or four counts added to it, but had the costs put on him in one case There were two more bills against him which were to have been taken up on Tuesday morning but, together with the other trolley cases were continued until the next term of criminal court which will be held on June second, when they will all be disposed of.

An amusing incident in the rendering of the verdict was the failure of one of the court officials to send out the bill of indictment along with the jury so that the jury really had nothing before them It was fortunate that these cases were disposed of under binding instructions from the court otherwise this failure to send out the bills might have made a very serious mixup resulting in a mistrial and might possibly have allowed the defendants their freedom entirely even if the verdict had been guilty

Borough Fathers wrestled on Monday night with the question of an increase in the salaries of our police force but failed to raise the salaries. Indeed at one time it looked as though there would be considerable reduction in the force but they finally decided that three were none too many considering the amount of territory they are expected to cover every night

On Monday workmen started in to remove the Clerk of Orphans Court from the first to the second floor of the front court house building and by Wednesday had their work practically completed Of course it will be sometime before the clerk gets his papers and books all arranged and in the good order he has always kept them, but it will in no way interfere with the issuance of marriage licenses. They are ready for the aspiring swain and his sweetheart at any old time, day or night but day preferred Clerk Michener is well pleased with his new quarters and after the feeling of newness works off expects to like them much better than the ones he had down stairs. On Thursday the prothonotary's office was started and its removal, so far as the mechanics are concerned, will probably be completed by Saturday, and then the recorder's office will be fitted up in the former prothonotary's office. As this will all be new work it is not expected that the business of the office will be interfered with to any appreciable extent The failure of the engineer, architect or by whatever name he may select, to consult with the recorder or any of his employes has resulted in what is usually called a botch job. In arranging the wall space for the deed and mortgage books looks, beauty or the somewhat hazy ideas of the designer were consulted with the result that as soon as the recorder moves into his new quarters he will have to place sixteen deed books under the counter and next year that sixteen will be nearer forty so that in less than three years there will have to be another grand jury recommendation and another change in the office made and it will naturally cost much more money to do it then than to provide now for at least a few years ahead It is not for lack of space, for there is plenty of room for the deed and mortgage books for the next twenty-five years under the new arrangement of the offices, the trouble arises from the poorly planned arrangement of the steel cases for the books. As a matter of cost the proper arrangement would not have exceeded another twenty-five or thirty dollars if done now but if two or three years are allowed to go by and the change then made it will cost several hundred dollars not counting the inconvenience that will have to be undergone and endured in the meantime

All of the county seat churches are making large preparations for Easter and in many of them the music will be finer than ever before Of course the floral decorations will be elaborate and beautiful

Cruelty to animals charges, usually only too plentiful at this time of the year, are few and far between this year, at the county seat So far but one man has been haled before a magistrate here on that charge and there seems to be some considerable doubt as to whether he so far neglected his live-stock as to make out the charge. Scarcity of money at the close of the winter is usually the cause here, among small farmers, but as this has been a very mild winter there has been more chance to provide the necessary feed and as a consequence prosecutions are fewer

The visit of Roosevelt to Philadelphia has created an activity in the circles of the Progressives that was conspicuous by its absence a few weeks ago That they are formulating plans seems to be beyond question but taking a leaf form the political hand book of experience of the two old parties they are keeping very quiet about their plans and about all they can be induced to say at this time is "We will be heard from later "

James Thierolf, of north Main street, at the county seat has, whenever it was at all possible, planted a patch of potatoes on St Patrick's day and as a rule has had very good results although neither he nor his forefather came from Paddyland but are the real blown in the glass Pennsylvania Germans This year he thought he would steal a march on St. Patrick so he planted a patch just one week, earlier.

Almost everybody was a-wearing of the green on Monday last. Reliable authorities said that while St. Patrick was well pleased with conditions generally still he did not altogether approve of the suffragettes so he gave a good imitation of a blizzard in the morning as an evidence of his disapproval Still, however came up smiling on Tuesday and local quidnunes say that that indicates a peaceful disposition on the part of the wives for the coming year and a consequent better time for their husbands

FRAIL, SICKLY CHILD

Restored to Health by Vinol—Letter to Mothers.

Anxious mothers often wonder why their children are so pale, thin and nervous and have so little appetite. For the benefit of such mothers in this vicinity we publish the following letter

J Edmund Miller, New Haven, Conn , says "My little daughter, ever since her birth, had been frail and sickly, and was a constant source of worriment Several months ago we commenced to give her Vinol. I immediately noted an improvement in her health and appearance. I gave her three bottles of Vinol, and from the good it has done her I can truly say it will do all you claim."

This child's recovery was due to the combined action of the medicinal elements extracted from cods' livers —combined with the blood-making and strength-creating properties of tonic iron, which are contained in Vinol

Vinol will build up and strengthen delicate children, old people and the weak, run-down and debilitated. We return the money in every case where it fails.

President Wilson is reported to favor making the tariff the chief subject of consideration at the special session of Congress which will assemble in April Such a recommendation is within his power, but Congress can do as it pleases It is not restricted like some state legislatures to the subjects mentioned in the call of the executive.

But the chances are that tariff legislation, with some attention to the House, perhaps, to currency and to loose ends left from the administration, will absorb about all the energy that Congress has By the time it gets through with the tariff it will be in such a stage of exhaustion that the members will be glad to forget Washington for a few weeks—if they can

Sheriff, arrest that proof-reader!

It seems, after all that it was not Senator Buckman, of Bucks, who introduced the bill providing for "certified journalists" but that the measure was presented by Senator Charles Snyder, of Schuylkill county It is reported that the Senate clerks made an error and during some confusion there was doubt as to the sponsor for the bill and it was naturally ascribed to the distinguished Senator from this county.

Our old friend of the sod, St Patrick, kicked up all sorts of weather conditions on Monday. Wind, snow and sunshine were features of the day.

The Democratic county committee of Bucks county has unanimously endorsed Ex-Senator Webster Grim, of Doylestown, for the nomination for Judge of the Superior Court, all of which reminds us that the Democracy of Bucks is not in as placid a condition as indicated by the action of the county committee However, we believe that there is no man who has held public official position in the State who has any cleaner record than the Hon. Webster Grim.

Why Not the Poppy?

Doylestown Intelligencer

Perkasians are just now in the throes of an aesthetic struggle that must be thrilling They are voting for a town flower What the favorites are up to this time has not been made known, but when the selection has been made every visitor to that burg will know it, for a business house has promised to give every voter a package of seeds So you see, Perkasie will be one great big flower bed this summer.

As Perkasie is one of the money marts of the county with its many business plants some gorgeous yellow flower suggestive of Der Gelt might be appropriate. Or as cigar factories are so numerous there they might adopt the blossom of the tobacco plant. Still better might be the "true blue" of the corn flower

Bordentown after Commission Government.

The movement for commission form of government for Bordentown, N. J., in place of Common Council is gaining headway, according to those who are advocating the move. The petitions which are being circulated calling for special election to submit the question to the voters are being signed by the workingmen and quite a few of the merchants and professional men

Changes at the Court House

The County Commissioners have ordered twelve new revolving chairs for the use of juries in the Court room, at Doylestown The chairs now in use are uncomfortable They will be taken to the Grand Jury room, where they will be used when sessions of court are held in that room.

The County Commissioners will also make better arrangements for their own convenience in transacting county business. The room now occupied by County Superintendent J. H. Hoffman is to be taken over by the Commissioners as a meeting place Here it will be possible to transact business without intrusion. The room is to be furnished appropriately for their use.

It was at first designed to take the room now occupied by the County Treasurer as a meeting room, moving that office over to the County Superintendent room, but it was thought to be unsuitable for the Treasurer When the Treasurer has business before the Commissioners' Board, and only one member of the office staff was present he would be obliged to look his office over, then be left the office, and then as often as it would not be as safe as at present.

County Superintendent J. H. Hoffman will occupy the Commissioners' meeting room.

MURDER CASES IN BUCKS COUNTY

Investigation of Homicide Cases Brings to Light a Number of Unsolved Mysteries.

Murders and murderous assaults that have occurred in Bucks county have been recalled by the trial and conviction last week of the Bristol colored men who were convicted last week at Doylestown for second degree murder

The Doylestown Intelligencer says Investigation of homicide cases in Bucks county brings to light the fact that quite a number of murders have remained unsolved mysteries, and that in one notable case, that of Adam Weaver, of Springfield township, who murdered Irvin Mondeau, of Nockamixon township, in February 1898, the murderer, though known, was never apprehended

When murders in the county are talked of the conversation generally goes back to that of Dr Chapman in 1838 by his wife and a Spaniard named Mina Mina was hung. Mrs Chapman escaped with a light sentence

The next was the murder of Mrs Jacob Armbruster by her husband in 1857 He was hanged.

In 1845 Alexander Rice and Sanders were acquitted of the murder of a negro named Kennard, who lived on Buckingham mountain They pleaded self defense

The Civil War was hardly over before a negro in Solebury became infuriated and murdered his wife, but was for some inexplicable reason acquitted

Albert Tuefel, a boatman on the canal who murdered Capt Wiley, shortly after the war, November, 1866, by attacking him with a hatchet, was convicted and hung

Closely following this crime George Weyer killed An Shepherd in 1867, but was acquitted on a plea of self-defense

Henry May, of Richboro murdered Thomas B Bennett on November 4, 1867, and on a verdict of second degree murder was sentenced to eleven and a half years

Within two weeks after this murder, a negro boatman murdered a man named Johnson at Morrisville, and summary conviction and punishment followed the man's capture, it is said

There seems to have been no murder then until November 25, 1887, when Harry F Gettys the New Hope bridge builder, shot and killed Charles T Kitchin, and George H. Neff, a Hilltown farmer, on September 7 1887, murdered John Gonsert, his hired man Gettys was convicted only of voluntary manslaughter and the circumstances were such that he received a sentence of but three months

Neff was sentenced to twelve years on being convicted of murder in the second degree It appears the jury believed he shot in self-defense

One of the most famous murders which followed was the atrocious killing of Mr and Mrs Samuel M. Rightley, of Northampton township, in the spring of 1894, while they slept by the half-breed, Wallace Burt Judge William C Ryan, then a young lawyer, and Howard I James were counsel for Burt On the first trial the jury disagreed, but before the second trial Burt confessed and was hung

An unsolved murder was that of Jacob Detweiler, of near Dublin By some it was claimed that this was a case of suicide

In June 1891, a Hungarian, was killed near Rushland, by a fellow countryman, who set upon him as he was returning from the christening of his child and choked him to death The murderer was never caught

One of the most baffling murder cases was the killing of Miss Annie Edwards, near Jamison, in 1898 Detectives worked on the case but the murderer was never caught. There were strong suspicions against one man, but he decamped and was never found.

In February of the same year, 1898, Irvin Mondeau, a deputy constable who went with officers to arrest Adam Weaver, of Haycock township, was shot and fatantly killed by Weaver, who escaped and has never since been found

Catharine Price, an Ivyland negress, who put her new born babe into a bucket of water on June 20, 1904, was acquitted of murder on a technicality Gustav Closson of Morrisville, who was convicted of murdering one of his half-witted sons, was convicted and sentenced to be hanged, but the sentence was afterward commuted to life imprisonment in the penitentiary, where he is at the present time

In March, 1904, Paul Weaver, of Tinicum township, fatally shot Miss Mary Wyker, aged 22 years, and then committed suicide

In August, 1906, the decomposed body of an unknown man was found in the Neshaminy creek near Langhorne, showing evidences of foul play. The murderer was never found.

In the fall of 1907 Fragnito Lisco, of Yardley, was convicted of killing another Italian but as it was shown that he did it in self-defense he only received a sentence of five years in the county jail

With the lower part of his face shot completely away Santa Barcolo, an Italian was found dead in the road near Roelofs, in December, 1909, but his murderer was never caught although there were suspicions as to his identity

On March 28, 1908 Joseph Banzer and Herman Haubt, two Trenton boys, went to the home of Mrs Anton Kade, near Tullytown, for purposes of robbery, and when she discovered them, they murdered her. They claimed that Banzer struck her with a club and that she fell against a knife Haubt had in his hand They were convicted of second degree murder and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary

At the November term of criminal court, 1911, Joe Wolins, alias Joe Wolfies, and George Kronheckel, alias George Plaskum, were tried for the murder of a Polander at Bristol, and acquitted The murdered man died of wounds he received in a fight and in falling down stairs

On November 17 1912 James and Joseph Smith, colored of Bristol, got into a quarrel with William Doyle, colored and twenty-six year old, at the Smith home, over a woman, Melissa Dean, and as the outcome of the affair Doyle was so badly shot in the back that he died in a Trenton hospital shortly afterward. The Smiths have several aliases.

The last murder occurred at Edison, near Doylestown, on February 19, 1913, when James Liuzi, alias James Librizzi, an Italian who had at one time been a barber in Doylestown and married Miss Ida Fry, of Edison, shot her to death in their bedroom and then sent a bullet into his left breast He is about recovered but will not be tried at this term of court

Just at this time it appears likely that another murder case will confront the authorities as Angelim Pasquale, of Rockhill, is in St. Luke's Hospital, Bethlehem, suffering from a bullet wound in her neck, said to have been inflicted by Guisseppi Andrea, who is now a fugitive

WANT TO BRIDGE RIVER AT BRISTOL

Petition Sent to War Department by Prominent Business Men.

According to the Philadelphia Public Ledger considerable interest had been aroused in the business world by plans advanced by David Henry Wright, a lawyer of 727 Walnut street, for the building of Government bridges across the Delaware river at Allegheny avenue and connecting Bristol and Burlington. Mr. Wright is also strongly in favor of a railway tube to connect Philadelphia and Camden, thereby making it possible for a person living in the latter city to ride to the Philadelphia City Hall for a single five cent fare. The proposed improvements and the possibility of bringing them about will soon be discussed meetings of the City Club and the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Mr. Wright recently wrote to Lieutenant Colonel Joseph E. Kuhn, of the United States Army Engineering Corps, regarding the advisability of building the two bridges. A bridge at Burlington would, according to the colonel, cost approximately $250,000, while one connecting Allegheny avenue and North Camden could be built at an expenditure of about $750,000. United States Senator Martine, of New Jersey, to whom Mr. Wright sent a petition signed by many business men, has agreed to bring the matter of building the bridges before Congress at the next session.

"There is a great need for these two undertakings as well as a Market street tube under the Delaware, said Mr. Wright in discussing the matter. "I live in New Jersey, although my office is here, and I know whereof I speak.

It now costs a person living in Camden and employed here 26 cents a day, or $1 56 a week to get to and from work. This should not be the case There are hundreds of poor girls living in Camden who can ill afford to spend one-third of their earnings on carfare. If a tube is built, however, I do not believe that it should be operated by any single corporation; it should be under government control."

With reference to the proposed bridge at Burlington, Mr Wright was very emphatic in condemning the present system of transporting across the river at that point. The ferry at Burlington, he said, does not run after 6 o'clock at night, thus making it necessary for the driver of any vehicle wishing to cross to make a detour of almost 30 mile to the Trenton bridge.

Mr. Wright plans to submit a petition to Secretary of War Garrison advocating the building of the two bridges In the text of the petition it is stated that the gross income of the Philadelphia and Camden ferry for the year 1911 was $320,710.55. A franchise yielding this sum, it is alleged, can well be assumed by the national government.

MANY BUCKS CO. PASTORS CHANGED

Rev. Rushton Goes to Reading and Dr. Brodhead Comes to Bristol.

Many changes were made in the appointment of the pastors of the Methodist churches at the close of the Philadelphia Conference on Tuesday. Dr. F. P. Parkin was re-appointed district superintendent of the central district which embraces Bristol.

Considerable surprise was created when it was known that Rev. Rushton had not been returned to Bristol as requested by the quarterly conference of the church. It was known that a Norristown congregation had requested the service of the popular Bristol pastor, but he was commissioned to go to Reading, and will move there with his family next week.

Dr. G. M. Brodhead, of the Summerfield church, Kensington, comes to Bristol. He will preach here on Sunday.

Rev. Rushton was transferred to Reading as pastor of St. Peter's and Peoples churches.

At Doylestown and Cozen's Memorial church, Doylestown, the Rev. J K. Stellar was appointed to succeed the Rev. H. R. McDade, who was transferred to Marcus Hook.

Mr. Koppel, of Morrisville, also will have charge of Fallsington.

E. F. Carson was sent to New Hope; R. A. McIlwain, to Newtown; E. S. Harshberger, to Tullytown and Emilie; B. W. Kito, to Yardley, which has been supplied for the last year. The appointee will become the resident pastor.

H. N Shenton was appointed at Cornwells, and H. R. Hoffman at Hulmeville and Bensalem. Jonathan Dungan was transferred from New Hope to Quakertown. L. H. G. Roland was sent to Lahaska and Lumberville.

The Rev. Benjamin LaPish, H. O. Carmichael, the Rev. O. J. Randall (supply) and the Rev. G. L. Schaeffer, Jr., all formerly of Yardley, were appointed to charges at Mahanoy City, Hancock street, Philadelphia; Richboro and Mt. Pocono, respectively.

WORK ON SEWERS AGAIN HEID UP

Work on the Bristol sewers has again been held up, owing to the Maple Beach Company making an appeal from the decision of the Bucks county court to the supreme court, on the approval of the borough's bond offered in relation to the borough crossing the property of the company with its pipes.

Will Elect Vestrymen.

The annual parish meeting for the election of wardens and vestrymen, of St. James Episcopal church, of Bristol, will be held in the choir room at 8 o'clock, Monday morning, March 24.

Township School Building Sold.

The Green Lane public school building, in East Bristol township, which was abandoned when the new building was constructed near the pipe foundry was sold at public sale last Saturday and was purchased by the Bristol Patent Leather Works for $400.

The building is a stone structure in good repair and is located on an acre of ground. The school board, years ago, paid $600 for the ground.

Card of Appreciation.

The members of the family of the late George C. Bunting, of Tullytown, wish to convey their appreciation to their friends and neighbors for the kindness and sympathy manifested during the hours of their sudden bereavement. William A. Lair, foreman of the railroad carpenters and his men, who were fellow workmen with Mr. Bunting, are especially remembered by members of the family for their kindness.

A Big Public Sale.

The public sale of the personal property, on the farm of the late Martin Ulrick, at Tullytown, on Tuesday and Wednesday drew immense crowds, the largest of any sale in recent years. The bidding was lively and things sold at high prices. Two acres of ground were covered with farming implements, tools, etc. Chickens sold for 19 1-2 cents a pound, geese 22 cents and turkeys 27 cents.

At the public sale of the property of the late Moses Vandegrift, near Eddington, on Wednesday there was another large attendance. A case of drawers which had been in the family for a hundred years was purchased by J. H. Vanzant, of Bristol.

Turtles lay from one hundred and fifty to two hundred eggs at a time.

Will Spend Easter at Atlantic.

Among those who will be among the gay Easter throng at Atlantic City will be the following who will be guests at the Grand Atlantic hotel: Mr. and Mrs. Walter F. Leedom and daughter, Miss Medora Leedom, of Bristol; Algernon Cadwallader, of Yardley; Mr. and Mrs. Charles White, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Thomas, Miss E. K. Leedom and I. R. Joyce, of Philadelphia.

GUILTY OF SECOND DEGREE MURDER

Smith Brothers, of Bristol, Convicted for Slaying William Doyle.

A verdict finding the defendants guilty of murder in the second degree was returned by the jury at Doylestown, in the case of Joseph and James Smith charged with the murder of William Doyle at Bristol one Saturday night, last winter The last witness in the trial was examined late on Saturday afternoon. The addresses by counsel were then made. Mr. Freed made a brilliant effort in behalf of his clients, holding the audience spellbound for an hour, while District Attorney Boyer with equal valor presented the cause of the Commonwealth in a forceful and masterly way. At the conclusion of the addresses by counsel court adjourned until 7.30 o'clock. Judge Ryan charged the jury at the evening session. He defined the law and explained the testimony as given by the witnesses in a clear and explicit manner. The charge was remarkable for its impartiality. It was generally spoken of by spectators as the best and fairest heard at Doylestown for many years.

The jury was conducted to the deliberation room at 8.30 o'clock and returned at 11 o'clock finding the defendants, James and Joseph Smith, both guilty of murder in the second degree.

Counsel Freed and Keller for the defendants, immediately entered a motion for a new trial and ten days time was allowed the court for filing reasons.

As the jurymen were retained for court on Monday the court asked how many, who had served for three days on the jury in the murder trial, desired to be excused and only three made such a request. They were Harry L. Moon, merchant, of Tullytown, Jesse C. Everitt, agent, Hulmeville, and Charles N. Schleifer, farmer of Springfield.

DEAN WOMAN GETS $180.

On Monday District Attorney Calvin S Boyer asked that Mrs. Dean, one of the principal witnesses in the Smith murder trial who had been in jail since November 1912, be released on a small bail. He stated that she would receive $180 from the county for having been held as a witness.

Judge Ryan, in view of the application for a new trial, fixed the bail at $500. The woman was taken back to jail, being unable to furnish the necessary bail.

Nursing Bureau Established.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Public Welfare Association, of Bristol, held in the high school building Friday evening, it was decided by the members that the association should establish a nursing bureau. This bureau will be in a position to furnish at any time a competent trained nurse for persons who may be in need of a nurse's services.

The association will within a short time make known the methods of procedure whereby the nurse may be secured through the Welfare Association.

The treasurer of the association reported a balance of $224.44 in the general fund of the association.

The Ways and Means committee reported that it had completed arrangements for the giving of an entertainment on April, in St. Marks school hall. Miss Marion Wilson, of New York, will give a number of character studies in costume.

A Publicity committee was appointed by the president.

The president, as the representative of the association, was instructed to write the representatives of this county in the legislature, requesting them to use their influence, in the passage of a bill providing for a state industrial reformatory home for women.

The Philanthropic and Legal Aid committees, reported a number of cases which are under their supervision at the present time.

In addition to the interesting reports of the various cases of the ward workers, which are cited by numbers and not by names, were letters of inquiry from New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia societies asking for information about relatives in Bristol, of persons applying to them for help.

The association holds a monthly meeting on the second Friday evening in each month in the high school building to which the public is cordially invited.

Death of Aged Resident.

Miss Sarah L. Yardley's One-Arm Officer.

Constable Frank Wist, of Yardley, is one of most prominent guardians of the peace in Bucks county. He has occupied that position for twelve years here and during that time has made scores of arrests.

Although he has only one arm he will go into any place after a criminal, regardless of the number of dangerous characters that may be there.

Mr. Wist has had a number of novel experiences but has invariably landed his man and has been responsible for the decrease in criminal activities in that vicinity.

It was under his persistent prosecution that the chicken thieving in Yardley was stopped. Constable Wist has also gained a reputation as a terrorists to automobilists who break the law.

Harry Baitzel, aged twenty-two, employed on the Pennsylvania Railroad from Cornwells to Eddington, in charge of the signal lamps was instantly killed on Tuesday afternoon by the local train due at Cornwells at 4.39 o'clock. Deceased formerly resided with his parents in Holmesburg, but since he began work on the railroad about six months ago, he has made his home in Bristol with Willard Bevan, on Pond street.

Deputy Coroner Rue was notified and the body brought to Bristol and prepared for burial.

CORNWELLS TEAM TROUNCES BRISTOL

On Thursday evening of last week the Cornwells Basket Ball team covered themselves with glory by defeating the Bachelor club, of Bristol, to the tune of 16 to 10. This aggregation of balltossers from Bristol arrived at the hall of the local club with a large following of rooters, all confident that they were going to meet something real easy in the village of Cornwells. However, shortly after the game begun the visitors found they were not playing amateurs, but a team that knew all the points of the game.

It was quite amusing to witness the start of play by the Bachelors, who seemed to imagine they were "It" until the local lads began shooting goal after goal into the basket, which caused the confidence of the visitors to rapidly melt like a snow drift in a hot summer sun. In fact the many poor shots made by the visitors towards the basket that failed to count gave the spectators the impression the reason this club selected the name of "Bachelor" was because each player expected to play the game alone, and doubtless use their mother's clothes basket to shoot a ball at instead of one of the regulation size, such as the Cornwells boys are in the habit of winning games with.

Following is the line up of both teams:

Cornwells first team: J. Vandegrift and W. Smith, forwards; W. Kepler, centre; P. Smith and George Vandegrift, guards. Bachelor club: D. Hermann and J. Hetherington, forwards; C. Sims, centre; McIlvaine and W. Warner, guards.

Following the above game the Cornwells second team played the Boys club, of Frankford, winning by the score of 42 to 7 for the visitors.

On Friday evening the Cornwells team paid a visit to Wissinoming, where both first and second teams of the local club met defeat by the following score. First team, Wissinoming 22, Cornwells 20. Second team, Wissinoming 35, Cornwells 27.

A Study From Life

Young Woman's Experience With a Supposed Maniac

By HOWARD FIELDING

Mary Hallett is the writer of the "Jenny" stories, which are now almost as famous as some brands of soap. Three years ago, when she was in Smith college, she sent a crude but very laughable tale to a magazine, which printed it and cried out for more. They are in book form now—two volumes, twenty four stories—and the poor girl's talent, which was worthy of serious cultivation, is in the way of speedy extinction.

Fancy writing two dozen deliberately funny stories in about thirty months! Fancy dragging Jenny through all that series of compulsory comedy and endeavoring to preserve her individual character or even her semblance to humanity! The life of the popular author is a tragedy more bitter than starvation, though the intoxicated victim may not realize the sadness of it.

Miss Hallett was very far from such a realization. She was not ashamed of Jenny, merely tired of her, and so she decided to write something else, a novel, a serious effort. But at this her publishers rose up and danced the ghost dance and sang the death song. Why be serious and throw away good money? It was finally agreed that Mary should write a funny novel.

There was a certain man named Sandison Lane who had begun by being very much in love with the gifted authoress and had ended by feeling toward her a wild exasperation. He was a writer with an artistic conscience and a living income. To Mary he was a source of unfailing amusement. When he sighed for her at first and later, when he used to saw the air with his arms while he lectured her upon the higher life in literature, she always wanted to laugh.

Sandison Lane suspected that she was lacking in essential honesty and beyond salvation, and the facts about the new novel settled this conviction in his mind. In an unguarded moment Lane had told Miss Hallett a story plot, based upon a rather grim modern instance which had come under his observation—the case of a man who had been crazed by pecuniary worries and had subsequently accomplished some rather startling achievements through the power of monomania which was unperceived by his associates. It struck Miss Hallett as a good joke to make a farce out of this tragedy and use it as the theme of her novel. And when she fell into difficulties with her plot, which was a short story pulled out until it broke so that it had a beginning and an end but no middle, she had not the smallest hesitation in sending for Lane and asking his help.

"I've used that little story that you told me," said she. "You don't object. You weren't going to use it yourself?"

"Oh, no," said Lane and ground his teeth.

He looked through all her rough drafts and memoranda carefully.

"What earthly license have you," said he, "to write about a condition of mental disturbance? You've never studied it."

"Indeed, I know more than you think," she said. "My uncle has a sanitarium in Midvale, Mich. Of course his patients are not very crazy, but some of them are queer enough."

"How long since you visited your uncle?"

"About ten years."

"When you were twelve! Well I'd recommend a more mature study. Why don't you go out there again?"

"Do you think it would do me any good?" said she. "I'm afraid I'd waste time. I've agreed to finish this book by the 1st of April."

Lane was one of those men who are angered by foolishness. He was now raging, but he preserved an outward calm, and the conversation went on to an end in the most amicable fashion.

Some days later Lane received a note from Miss Hallett saying that she had decided to go to her uncle's at Midvale and would like him to call before her departure. He did not fail to do so, for in the meantime a rather odd coincidence had arisen in this affair.

"It happens," said he, "that I am sending your uncle a patient—that is I am one of several who are doing it. He'll be rather a good study for you too."

"What's the matter with him?" she inquired.

"He was a clerk in a broker's office downtown, lost his job in the panic and was crazed by pecuniary worry. He has a mother and two sisters depending upon him, and the strain has been too much."

"Raving?"

"No, indeed, nothing of the sort. You'd never know that there was anything wrong with him. He has delusions, but he keeps them to himself. It is possible for a lunatic to be a gentleman. What will become of this poor fellow I don't know, but we're going to give him a chance. I used to think the world of him in college. We've bought him some clothes and have fixed things so that his people can get along for some months and now he's going out to your uncle's place with a cheerful heart and $100 in his pocket."

"I don't see how he can be very cheerful," said she, "depending upon charity."

"But he doesn't know anything about it," answered Lane. "His mind has suffered all the pangs of poverty that it can bear and has jumped to the other side of the fence. Poor John Wilbraham thinks he's a millionaire and that his mother and sisters are living in a beautiful home which his bounty has provided for them."

Miss Hallett did not reply, being busy with her own thoughts.

"I could go out on the same train with him," she said. "You can point him out to me, you can arrange to get him a place in the same car."

"Why not let me introduce him?" said Lane. "He is a thoroughly delightful companion."

"Wait till I have seen him," said she. "I shall have an opportunity at the station."

She was prepared to find Mr Wilbraham a very odd crank—in fact, an obvious crank. On the contrary, he proved to be ultra conventional in aspect, having the look of one of those big, handsome, rather dull English men whose manner is the most correct in the world. Miss Hallett saw him from the steps of a car. He was bidding goodby to Lane and some other young man.

She beckoned to Lane, and he came promptly.

"You may introduce Mr. Wilbraham," said she.

In one sense she had been disappointed. If the man disclosed no active oddities, if he behaved just like everybody else he would be of no use to her. This was her earliest conviction after the journey had begun. The notion that Wilbraham was dull had vanished in the first few minutes. She was almost immediately at a certain dominant character in his mind. She felt herself stimulated, impelled to appear at her best before him, but what had this to do with a study of mental disturbance for the purposes of fiction?

She tried to set her mind at work. She appealed to her ambition and to the half recognized habit of hurry (which is the bane of the successful author) but all to no purpose. She could think of nothing but the man's personal charm. His voice thrilled her. The deep tones affected her at times with a sudden faintness. This influence was wholly new in her experience, for the girl had written love stories by the dozen without ever having encountered in real life the phenomenon of personal magnetism. "Jenny" was always falling in love. Miss Hallett's capacity for treating the "grand passion" playfully, as if her adult characters were not more than seven years old, was a gift worth thousands of dollars to her publishers.

And it was perfectly genuine. The girl had a child's heart, absolutely unawakened. She made what she would have called a "study" of Wilbraham's influence, and reached the brilliant conclusion that it was due to her sympathy for him.

"My sisters are great admirers of your stories," said he.

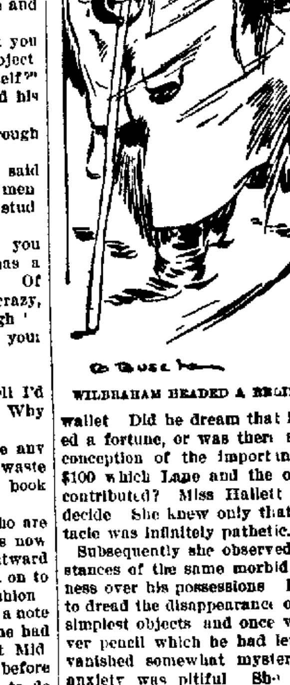

Temptation seized upon Miss Hallett.

"Do they live in New York?" she asked.

"No," he replied, "I have just bought a place for them and my mother in"—he seemed to hesitate a moment choosing a location and finally said—"the suburbs of Boston."

And he proceeded to describe it. Oh what a little garden of Eden and how vividly pictured! His eyes took on a dreamy look. He seemed to be walking in the garden where there would be many flowers in the spring and fountains playing and the sound of laughter. Miss Hallett was stricken with an intolerable effect of pathos. She wondered that she did not weep but the touch of horror kept her dry eyed. For the first time she thought of her own success in the world as unmerited. She felt like a silly child beside this man who had failed to make his bare living.

Apparently the indulgence in his delusion had somewhat affected his general poise. When he had finished speaking of his mythical estate he rose to go over to his own seat to get a copy of a magazine which he had previously mentioned. His overcoat lay on the seat facing Miss Hallett's, and there was a large wallet in the breast pocket. Wilbraham took a step away and then returned with a nervous and embarrassed manner and secured the wallet. Did he dream that it contained a fortune, or was there some sane conception of the importance of the $100 which Lane and the others had contributed? Miss Hallett could not decide. She knew only that the spectacle was infinitely pathetic.

Subsequently she observed many instances of the same morbid watchfulness over his possessions. He seemed to dread the disappearance of even the simplest objects, and once when a silver pencil which he had let her take vanished somewhat mysteriously his anxiety was pitiful. She found the pencil in her hand bag, and he received it from her almost with a sob. Here were possibilities of comedy, but Miss Hallett could not see them.

The day was cold and dull, and presently it began to snow heavily. By nightfall the drifts were high, and next morning the train was some hours late in Buffalo. But beyond that point the condition of the tracks was much worse. It was the severest storm of the winter and indeed of years. By afternoon the train was blocked, and there seemed no prospect of release. Meanwhile every morsel of food had been eaten chiefly by the passengers in the Pullmans, and wails of real distress had begun to arise from the day coaches.

In this emergency Wilbraham headed a relief party which fought its way through the blizzard to the nearest town and returned laden with supplies which were gratuitously distributed. In this task Miss Hallett took a part, and she heard Wilbraham's name mentioned with fervent gratitude, but the utterance which impressed her most was from the lips of a member of the relief party.

"That fellow insisted on paying for everything," said this man. "He would not let anybody else spend a cent."

Now the cost of the supplies could not have been less than $50, and Miss Hallett was horrified. Poor Wilbraham's delusion of wealth had led him to spend money which was not truly his, but had been intrusted to him for a specific purpose—his maintenance at the sanitarium. What would he do without it?

The thought tormented the girl during the wretched night that followed. By morning the girl had formed a wild resolution, in the execution of which she was singularly favored by fortune. Mr Wilbraham left his wallet in his overcoat pocket when he went forward to inquire about breakfast, and Miss Hallett secured it. A hasty glance showed her that it contained less than $50, and the girl made up the sum to a hundred from her own funds, being well assured that he would never know the difference.

To do this without being seen by the other passengers was a matter of some skill, and she had just accomplished it when Wilbraham appeared. The girl tried to put the wallet back into the overcoat, and it fell upon the floor. She picked it up in a panic and thrust it into her hand bag.

The next four hours were unique in Miss Hallett's experience. She was a thief. Try as she might she found no opportunity to restore the plunder. They breakfasted together, they chatted afterward, they changed cars for Midvale, they reached that destination and were driven up to the sanitarium in a sleigh, and still Wilbraham's wallet remained in the girl's possession. Every moment she dreaded that he would discover his loss. Indeed, she kept fancying that he had done so and was concealing it from her.

The instant that she reached the sanitarium she sought her uncle, but he was from home. She waited for him in dire suspense, and at last with infinite relief she heard his voice in the vestibule. But what was this that he was saying?

"Mr Wilbraham has gone?" The doctor's strong voice arose to her when she leaned over the banister on the second floor. "Why, what does this mean?"

"He has left a note for you," a servant said.

Miss Hallett flew down the stairs and pursued the doctor into his room.

"It is my fault!" she cried. "Mr Wilbraham has missed his money, and he doesn't know what to do. Send after him at once."

And she poured out her story half hysterically.

"Why, what's all this?" exclaimed the doctor, interrupting her after the fifth attempt. "Mr Wilbraham isn't insane."

"He thinks himself rich."

"Well, why shouldn't he? Good gracious! He's John Wilbraham of Wilbraham & Co. He's worth millions. He hasn't come here as a patient. He's come to see a cousin of his. But here's the man's note. Let's see what he says."

The doctor opened the note and read aloud:

"My Dear Dr Hallett—I will speak very frankly to you. I have become very deeply interested in your niece. You who know her unfortunate condition will recognize the folly of encouraging a feeling which can end only in sorrow. I know very little about kleptomania, but my strong impression is that a cure rarely occurs and that a general failure of the mental powers is nearly sure. Oh it is terrible! So young, so beautiful and with such gifts. It is better that she and I should not meet again, but I beg you to come to me at the Inn where I am staying and tell me whether there is any hope for her. You will find my pocket book among her things. It is no matter. Please do not let her know that I missed it. Perhaps I should state that I met your niece through my friend Mr Sandison Lane of New York, who informed me of her sad state and asked me to watch over her during this journey. I little dreamed what this would mean to me."

The doctor glanced up at his niece.

"You seem to take this calmly," he said.

"I could strangle Sandison Lane," she said, "but I am very happy."

And she burst into tears.

Scotland's "Daft Days."

So hilarious were the old ceremonies of welcoming the new year in Scotland that Dec 31 and Jan 1 won for themselves the designation of "the daft days." Temperance legislation has done much in recent years to moderate and refine the festivities, which still, however, assume extensive and exuberant proportions. Only a few years ago a writer in the London Chronicle in Edinburgh on New Year's eve saw the "Black Maria" perambulating the streets and picking up the hopelessly drunken persons from the pavements and doorsteps for conveyance to the police station.

It was formerly the custom in Ireland and Wales to carry a lantern tastefully decorated with ribbons and containing a wren round each hamlet and village on New Year's day and make calls on dwellers in cottage and hall. The bearers, swinging the lantern at each door, would favor all whom it might concern with a song and receive a monetary reward.

The Old Time Stagecoach.

In 1702 there were, strange as it seems, only six stagecoaches running in all England, and of course these were the only public vehicles for travelers. Even these were a novelty, and a person named John Crosset thought they were such a dangerous innovation that he wrote a pamphlet against them.

"These coachees," he wrote, "make gentlemen come to London upon every small occasion, which otherwise they would not do except upon urgent necessity. Nay, the conveniency of the passage makes their wives come often up, who rather than come such long journeys on horseback would stay at home. Then when they come to town they must be in the mode, get fine clothes, go to plays and treats and by these means get such a habit of idleness and love of pleasure that they are uneasy after."

Roast Pig In Servia.

The favorite dish of the Servians, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, consists of a lamb or sucking pig roasted whole over ashes. A pit is first dug and filled with wood vine branches for choice as they give the best flavor—and the fire is then allowed to burn for several hours. The carcass is next impaled with a stout stick and slowly turned round and round over the embers. The result after six hours' turning is a very luscious meat, for all the gravy is kept in and the meat is unusually tender. No picnic in Servia is considered complete without this delicacy. A story goes that on one of his campaigns Napoleon noticed a group of Servian soldiers cooking meat in this way, whereupon he came up, inquired what they were doing, tasted the meat and was delighted with it.

London's Hot Baked Potatoes.

There are few colder places on a winter's night than the streets of London. Naturally anything warm is welcomed by wayfarers. Roasted chestnuts and hot pies stand high in public favor, but the cry of "Baked potatoes, all hot!" is peculiarly inviting. The simplest form of a potato can—really more like a box than a can—is of plain unpainted tin, not unlike that used by the street pieman. In the central portion the potatoes are kept hot, while in compartments on each side salt and butter are kept. A large pepper box usually stands on the top of the can. A small valve lets out the steam, and its whistling guides the traveler in search of a hot potato. Street corners where an omnibus stops or near places of amusement are favorite spots for the vendors of this delicacy. The season lasts from the latter part of September until about the end of March. It is said that more than 3,000 people gain their livelihood in this way in the streets of London.

Musical Sound and the Ear.

The well trained ear of a musician can distinguish notes differing only one hundredth part of a tone from one another. Most people cannot perceive a difference of one-tenth of a tone, and a few can scarcely tell one tone from another. The cause of this curious disparity resides in slight differences in the structure of the cochlea, a wonderful piece of apparatus in the inner most part of the ear. It is a little body shaped like a snail shell and believed to be the part of the hearing apparatus which recognizes musical sounds. In its structure it closely resembles the strings of a piano and even has a damper to prevent the mixture of sounds quickly following one another. This little musical apparatus is set going by vibrations received from the middle ear or drum, and in some mysterious manner it sends these on to the brain through the auditory nerve in the form of musical sounds.

Ignorance.

Matrimonial.

A LOAD OF DAINTIES.

The Prize His Feat of Daring Won For the Hungry Soldiers.

While a large Cuban force, before the outbreak of the Spanish American war, was besieging a town held by the Spaniards the officers found it difficult to get any variety in their daily bill of fare. General Frederick Funston, at that time in the Cuban service along with other young Americans, describes in his book "Memories of Two Wars," some of the "diversions" by which delicacies were obtained—or not, as the case might be.

"Time hung heavily on our hands, but we had some diversions.

One night Huntington made a lone hand raid on the town. He crawled through the Spanish lines, roamed unchallenged through the streets and came back with a fine turkey.

Inspired by this feat Colonel Carlos Garcia's negro servant who had known the town well in times of peace, begged his chief for permission to enter and try to get a supply of Spanish delicacies from the abandoned stores. Permission was reluctantly given and the plucky fellow set out on his perilous errand.

He wormed his way through the grass crawled under the barb wire entanglements, reached the center of the town and effected entrance into a general store. Inside it was pitch dark and he dared not strike a light, but by feeling about he found a lot of promising cans and put them in a sugar sack that he had with him.

Handicapped by his heavy load, he found returning slow and painful, as well as dangerous. But finally, after an absence of five hours the exultant negro placed his load at Colonel Garcia's feet, whose friends promptly gathered to see the result of the raid and mayhap to partake thereof.

By the light of a campfire the sack was quickly emptied of its contents—eighteen cans of house paint! If there was any one thing that nobody had any use for in those days it was house paint. The subsequent proceedings were appropriate to the occasion.

The Missing Brogue.

In his book of reminiscences George Chirgwin, the English comedian, tells a story that illustrates two of his strong points on the stage—his quickness of repartee and his trick of entering into confidential relations with his audience.

He was singing an Irish song in an Irish town once, but he had some difficulty with the brogue.

A typical Pat in the audience stood up and called out indignantly, "Och, ye spalpeen an' where's yer brogue intoirely?"

Chirgwin grinned cheerfully.

"You've got it," he said, and the audience screamed themselves hoarse with delight.

Kept Him In His Place

He was a bonehead pugilist and we will call him Kid Scott. He was fighting in a town in the west one night. He put the other fellow down for a count, but as the referee said nine the other fellow started to get up.

KICKED HIM IN THE NECK.

Scott walked over and kicked him in the neck.

"Great Scott, man!" said his manager groaning, as Scott was disqualified. "Whatever made you kick him in the neck? You had him licked!"

"Sure I had him licked," yelled Scott. "The slob didn't have no business tryin' to get up!"—Cincinnati Times Star.

More Suitable

A very stout young woman asked advice about her costume for a fancy dress ball. "I think of going as Helen of Troy," she ended. "Do you think it would suit me?" Her companion surveying the young woman's swelling contours with a faint smile answered "Helen of Troy—or perhaps don't you think Helen of Avoirdupois would be better?"

The Drummer's Secret.

Here is an old war story. As a regiment of soldiers was on the march to Gettysburg some of the soldiers stepped out of the ranks and confiscated a couple of geese, and one of the drummers unheaded his instrument and put the captured birds in the drum.

Shortly afterward the colonel rode along and, noticing the boy, said sharply:

"Why don't you beat that drum?"

"Colonel," said the drummer mysteriously, "I want to speak to you."

The colonel drew still closer and bending down his head said, "Well, what have you to say?"

The drummer whispered, "Colonel, I've got a couple of geese in here."

The colonel straightened up and gravely said: "Well, if you're sick and can't play, you needn't."

The colonel had roast goose that night.

To make an out-of-town telephone call, tell the operator the name of the Exchange and the number you wish to speak to. She will immediately record this on a special ticket.

The operator using this ticket calls the distant point over trunking wires and secures the number you desire. The connection is then ready and the conversation begins.

Thus a vibrant wireway has been built up for your voice—two lines of copper wire constitute this circuit; for example, from Philadelphia to New York 180 miles of wire are placed at your exclusive service.
